

ANGELA MORNINGSTAR
(Abler – Dellger)

Baby, you're a mixed-up child searchin' for a friend someone who you think is right to satisfy your end.
You haven't got a notion yet of what it means to care or change that desperation that is chokin' in the air.
Well, you could have 'most any name that has a pretty sound it doesn't matter who you know, how much you been around.

Angela Morningstar,
open up your eyes
the face that you show me is just a disguise.
The daylight is stealing the wind from the dark the ship is unloading, it's time we embark.
Falling from your city tower long before we met mothered by experience, too hard to forget.
I must agree to play the game the stakes are far too high to lose myself in love affairs that were not meant to die.
And though you're only seventeen and have so much to learn, I cannot rid the memory
you make the fire burn.

Angela Morningstar...

Oh, there's some land in Tennessee I'm gonna buy in spring to watch the Mississippi flow like honey for a king.
But only you could make me stay
I need you by my side, the river seems so cold alone and the pain's too great to hide.

Angela Morningstar....