

SUMMER SONG AT DAWN
(Keith Abler – Mike Dellger)

You're rolling out early this morning I'd like to come along if I can the sun didn't even start risin' but forgetting us ain't part of its plan, not at all.

I'm happy just knowing you're near me when dew wets the face of our shoes we're richer than Saturday clover in thoughts that can't dare to lose.

Oh my love, to you I sing a summer song at dawn
come along and sit beside me for just a little while Everyone who's listening can feel a bit of joy
From knowing that I'm looking at you smile,
From knowing that I'm looking at you smile.

It's time we count up our blessings to know that we freely are one, the song from inside me is burning like rays from a bright, newborn sun.

Oh my love, to you I sing a summer song at dawn
come along and sit beside me for just a little while Everyone who's listening can feel a bit of joy
From knowing that I'm looking at you smile,
From knowing that I'm looking at you smile
